TODAY THE KING OF England leaves to cruise in the Mediterranean for his health. They take good care of him. He will avoid the rough Atlantic and board the royal yacht at Genoa, where it waits, escorted by two destroyers.

From Calais, the British royal train, kept always in readiness for emergencies on French soil, will take him to Italy and his yacht.

ABSIT OMEY or Entertainers, as our German friends would say. But if the Czar had kept such a train ready, he and his children might be alive now. The British kings obey their people, serve them as well as they know how, and Britishers, at least as democratic as we are, like their kings. They prefer, a good quiet one to an election every four years.

THE KING'S MAJESTY, in ancient English, written for him in the prescribed style, appoints a commission to take care of the state while he is gone.

"For divers causes and considerations, the King has instructed his right trusty and well-beloved counselors, Prince Henry, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Viscount Cave and Premier Baldwin, to look after the safety and good government of the realm, etc."

"They have full power, except that they may not dissolve Parliament, or confer ranks and titles."

HE INCLUDES in his commission his son, the church, the peerage and one commoner, Baldwin. The latter, of course, is the real king, and writes out what the King signs, but he does not say so. Everything is done respectfully, in that well-managed empire.

GORDON CURZON is dying at 85, very young for a British statesman. He represents a class of Englishmen whose lives are devoted to the nation's service.

In our humble American grocery store way, we contribute a little to the commissariat department of British government. A Chicago fortune, that of Leiter, the dry goods man, enabled Curzon to forget everything but public service. And so with the half American Churchill. His mother had the fortune of Jerome, New York stock broker. "They also serve, who only stand and wait."

THE SHINGLE HEADACHE has arrived, and was inevitable. Silly women, not content to cut their hair short, actually allow the barber to shave the back of the neck, uncovering that part of the body most sensitive to cold, the little hollow at the base of the skull. Cut your hair that way, then motor with your back to the driver, and you have found the short cut to acute neuralgia and pneumonia.

YOU SHUDDER at the complaint of Mrs. Dolores Winfree, wife of a sailor. Her jealous husband burned his initials into her back with a red hot iron, to warn other men away. Such conduct, once common, persists here and there. In far Patagonia, the bridegroom, on his wedding day, stands his wife against a tree and with a stone knocks out two of her front teeth to show that she is really his. And she thinks that means affection. Read Elie Reclus.

DENNISTOUN LIVED IN FLAT FURNISHED BY LADY CARNARVON

London, March 19.—The Dowager Countess Carnarvon today took the stand in the sensational Dennistoun trial. Once during the evidence she nearly fainted, but recovered with the help of smelling salts.

The interesting testimony, with which the case is being fought was noticeable during the continuation of cross examination of the defendant, Colonel Ian Dennistoun, and there were a number of heated exchanges between the Colonel and Sir Ellis Home Williams, of counsel for his ex-wife.

HOW TORNADO WREAKS HAVOC

Closeup of a typical tornado in which the camera man was so near its actual path that two negatives had to be used showing the elongated spout at the top, the curve to ward the ground and the characteristic dust cloud at the base, indicating how tremendous weights are lifted by the wind as in one town yesterday where a huge grain elevator was moved 40 feet without being demolished. In another instance heavy planks were carried 16 miles from one town to another.

MANY TOWNS SWEEPED BY FLAMES AFTER WRECK BY TORNADO

(By The Associated Press.)

Tornado dead estimated at 500 to 1,000 in five States.

Injured estimated at 2,500 to 3,000.

Homeless estimated at 8,000 to 10,000.

A midafternoon tornado, the worst hour to strike, when children were packed in schools and workers in stores and shops, yesterday's storm in five midwestern States still held many victims buried and unreported this afternoon.

Where it did the worst damage, the tornado lasted less than five minutes.

It flattened heavily constructed school and business buildings with worse results than the casualties in lighter dwellings.

Babies in homes were special sufferers.

Fires still raging or smoldering and millions of dollars' worth of wreckage delayed counts of the larger death lists.

The hardest hit places were three cities in southern Illinois—West Frankfort, Murphysboro and Carbondale.

Nearly all the destruction was in the soft coal fields.

Next to Illinois, the worst sufferers were in Indiana.

BODIES OF PUPILS STACKED IN HEAPS

Centra, Ill., March 19 (A.P.).—A graphic eyewitness account of the destruction of the De Soto Public School, and the widespread damage there was told by Max Burton, a telephone operator for the Illinois Central Railroad at Tamaroa, about 2½ miles from the scene of the disaster. Burton hastened to the little town immediately after receiving word of the disaster.

"Rescue workers were piling bodies of little children on mattresses and blankets on the playground, outside of the schoolhouse," Burton said. "It seemed that there was no one there to claim them. Their parents were being taken to hospitals on special trains and ambulances."

"The hallways of the schoolhouse had been blown in and the passageway was covered with bricks. The few people engaged in rescuing them could not get in to them. I saw about twenty bodies and while I was there they carried some away, meanwhile others were being brought in."

PHONE INCREASES HELD UP TO JULY

Telephone rates will not be increased until July 1.

The increase sought by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company was postponed today by order of the State Department of Public Utilities. The extension to give more time for public hearing.

They were to have become operative on April 1, according to the company's plans. If they are eventually granted, the increase will be about $12,000,000 to the annual revenue of the company. They will also increase the bills of Bay State telephone users from 25 to 40 per cent.

The case for the company is in and the case for the cities and towns protesting against the increase will be presented on May 4 by E. M. Starnes, corporation counsel of Boston.

NEW FLOOR FOR SHEPHERD

New Law to Curb Fake Auctioneers Is Urged

SHEPHERD HELD TO NEW FLOOR FOR GOODS ARE SOLD TO BUYERS

Suspected McClintock Slayer Spends the Night Lying Alongside Criminals

Chicago, March 19.—William D. Shepherd, held at $1,500,000, accustomed to every luxury money can buy, slept last night on the bare, cold floor of Cook county jail.

It was Shepherd's first night in custody, following his indictment on the charge of murdering his father-in-law, William Nelson McClintock, former Dartmouth student.

For Shepherd, whose nerve is badly shaken, whose morale is at low ebb, and who faces a grim path that may lead to the gallows, it was a night of terror.

JAIL OVERCROWDED.

The county jail is so overcrowded that eighty prisoners are forced to sleep on the floor. The beds in the jail are allotted according to the seniority rule, and seventy-nine prisoners are entitled to beds that must be vacated before Shepherd's turn comes.

A pair of cheap blankets, none too clean, were given the man accused of administering cyanide to the man who had been indicted for the murder of his father-in-law, William Nelson McClintock, former Dartmouth student.

Shepherd protested—his attorneys protested—even State's Attorney Crowe said he had no objection to Shepherd being permitted to stay in a hotel under guard. But Sheriff Peter Lottman, responsible for the prisoners, turned a deaf ear to the entreaties.

"I'm responsible and Shepherd is going to jail, the same as any other prisoner," declared the sheriff.

Shepherd had as his cellmate on the main floor a man accused of murdering two men, one of whom was another man accused of attacking a child. The wealthy prisoner kept only faintly during the night. The victim which infests the cell and the jail did not sleep in his bed.

He was up before dawn, his face drawn and haggard as a result of the ordeal of the night.

It has become clear that Shepherd will make a terrific fight for freedom. The first step will be for admission to bail. His lawyer said:

"We are prepared to put up bail to the extent of $500,000."

Shepherd's lawyers will use every known technicality to have the indictment against him quashed. They will seek by every means possible to make it appear that Shepherd has been framed up. They won a minor victory along this line.

ENTER NO PLEAS.

Although the grand jury had returned its true bill charging Shepherd with the murder of McClintock, the two defendants were not arraigned and entered no pleas. The formality, which may develop into much more than a formality, went over until Saturday.

The adjournment followed an attack on the indictment by William Scott Stewart, counsel for Shepherd. Stewart demanded that Shepherd be held on bail. He contended the indictment was not being arraigned in the county seat of Cook county, as required by law. He cited a long-forgotten law of 1845, which made the boundary of Cook county south of the Chicago River. The court house is north of the river.

Stewart contended that the indictment is faulty in that it charges the death of poisoning. His lawyer has a law to the effect that should germs do not constitute a crime.

LOOK FOR LOOPHOLES.

Three citations called lawyers to open their eyes. They are not important. They can be overcome by new indictments at any time. But the use of them demonstrates that Shepherd and his lawyers are to have as many technicalities as possible.

Shepherd was arraigned in the morning by Judge Jacob Hopkins. Fairman was remanded to the custody of State's Attorney Crowe. Crowe was asked if he wanted Shepherd any longer. He said:

"No, we are through with him." He said he would keep him in custody, of course, to the board.

Judge Hopkins will sign the law.

AUTHOR OF STORY OF SOCIAL WHIRL

Edith Gould Wainwright Will Describe Social Life in Boston Evening American

Behind granite walls, far back from towering green hedges, in the hilly trim, white yachts on the rolling green swells—on the playgrounds of Newport, Bar Harbor, Southampton and Palm Beach—the rich live out their lives.

You've wondered yourself what kind of lives they lead. If you're a man you're rather shrugged at the leisure the wealthy are supposed to enjoy.

If you're a girl, you've placed yourself in the next pangs of Miss Bixby or Miss Cyprien Boudin, and you've pictured to yourself just the kind of nearest your type in the wealthy "other half" spend each one of her hours. Sure you have!

STORY BEGINS MONDAY.

Now you'll know just exactly how it goes. Beginning in Monday's Boston Evening American, you will be given a long look into one rich girl's life: not a tiny, atypical peek, but a personally conducted, hand-holding tour that covers over nearly twenty-four hours of her life, from her marriage and into her motherhood.

Edith Gould Wainwright is the guide, and she better guide could there be than Edith Gould Wainwright, for she is one of America's wealthiest girls.

Not only is Edith Gould Wainwright one of the wealthiest of wealthy girls, but she is of a family highest on the slim peak that towers above "Just society," and her father was the late George J. Gould.

EVERY DETAIL.

Every small detail of her life, from her first day in the world, but not on earth, for she was born on a yacht—the present day when she is a mother among society mothers, has been set down by Mrs. Wainwright.

The chronicle is just as you yourself would describe in detail the details of your existence, from the smallest to the greatest. She has seen everything.

You will be taken by Mrs. Wainwright through the circles of the famed Four Hundred and you will penetrate into those mystic inner circles which were many of the Four Hundred have not a glimpse into.

In Monday's Boston Evening American, this fascinating story of a rich girl's life begins, and once you have started to, you will not miss an installment until the last word has been read. We promise you.

Watch for it in Monday's Boston Evening American!

REPORT MEASURE

As Wednesday was the last day for new bills, the committee, presided by Mr. Wainwright, decided to report a measure based on Section 14 of the bill filed by Representative James A. Torrey of Beverly on behalf of the Massachusetts Retail Jeweler's Association.

Section 14 of the bill provided for the weekly sale and auction report of the local police authorities by all such auctioneers, but the committee failed to agree on this issue, and on Section 14, fell the prohibition of night sales rated with the local licensing officials to act as they saw fit.

Reporting of the measure by the committee in the rough was a signal victory for the better business interests and the buying public who seek to stamp out "dark auction" rooms throughout the Commonwealth.

OPPOSE NIGHT SALES.

The Massachusetts Retail Jeweler's Association sought specifically to incorporate in a new statute that may be passed the clause for bidding sales between 6 p. m. and 8 a. m. The desire to put a stop to night sales was paramount because of the diamonds and other stones and jewelry are pawned off in the night and sold in the morning at a profit under artificial light.

The Massachusetts Retail Jeweler's Association's Bill No. 518 was introduced by the Retail Trade Commission, Boston Better Business Association, Inc., the Boston Jeweler's Association and business interests generally.

Genuine diamonds and gold watches have been put up for auction, and declared for inspection in the crowd, and during the bidding, have been secretly substituted by cheap brass watches and similar articles.

The campaign was waged to restrict sales to day hours, a move already made, however, by local business interests.

Representative Walter D. Allen of Worcester, a member of the Committee on Legal Affairs, said:

"The committee was satisfied that excessive frauds are not infrequently committed in the night and that prompt measures for relief should be taken by the Legislature. This public is being robbed. I know because I made it my business to attend several sales in questionable shops. I say them, which the 'crooks' with the famous time worn English Jan. I find a dime myself to see what would happen and pulled out after it got ticklish."

WHOLESALE GIVING.

"They asked for fifty cent bids on blind bonds the contents of which were not disclosed. The auctioneer asked the crowd to leave conference and to go to the back of the room and covered twelve envelopes with the dime bid, each bidder having the number written on the envelope."

"Then he switched to other sales. There was more than a half hour before he came back to the bidders on the boxes. They gave out bids with clean profit or else a loss. Then he asked for bids on other bonds and now and women supporting he would stand the same roundabout tactic and get what they wanted."

"It for the cheapest kind of imitation pearl beads."

"They wouldn't have worth more than a quarter. I got data and saw the goods, and they were not what they ought to be. They ought to be cleaned up."

"I'm a great believer in the policy not to interfere with private business, but when it comes to the public, we are not consulting a business. It's a public and ought to be cleaned up. Their methods are dirty and contrary to the general view of business."

ENGINEER BLAMED FOR MAINE CENTRAL CRASH

Augusta, Me., March 18.—The Public Utilities Commission in a decision today held that the failure of Engineer D. C. N. H. FUNDS NOT WASTED, EX-OFFICIAL SAYS

Finances Handled According to Statute Provisions, Plummer Asserts

Manchester, N. H., March 25.—Wesley Plummer, formerly State treasurer, in a statement today asserted the charges of misappropriation of New Hampshire trust funds contained in a report of a Boston audit firm last Tuesday.

"The statement published in Tuesday papers," he said, "that $149,000 of State of New Hampshire trust funds had been misappropriated is very misleading. The finances were handled strictly in accordance with the provisions of the statute."

"The term misappropriation of funds implies that a good many irretrievable entrusted with the administration of the affairs of the State of New Hampshire have been denied to their duty."

"That executives with their consciences and treasures of the State, followed the laws on the statute books, and they resented such sweeping charges."

"In place of a shortage of State funds there was a question of policy as to how best to handle them."

PROVIDENCE SCHOOLS HIT BY FLU

Scores of Children Are Ill and Schools May Be Ordered Closed

Providence, March 19.—The public schools in Providence may be ordered closed by the health authorities as the result of an epidemic of influenza that has scores of students in their beds.

A survey conducted on orders of Dr. Ellen A. Stone of the State Board of Health revealed that 11 pupils were out of the Brackett street school suffering from influenza; 13 students at the Plain street school were ill; Friendship school has 13 absent; Grover street school has 11 students out and Oxford street school has 10 cases.

The influenza is a comparatively mild form of the disease and so far no deaths have been reported.

Bay State's 'First Lady' To Be Guest of Honor

Afternoon Tea to Be Feature of Opening Tomorrow of "Women's Activities" Exposition in Horticultural Hall

Betty Alden

THE LIGHT OF OFFICIALDOM IS DUE to shed its refuges upon Horticultural Hall tomorrow afternoon in the persons of Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Miss Allen and Mrs. Frederic W. Cook, who are honor guests at the tea which leads a festive air to the opening day of two such devoted to Women and the Pageant of her manifold "Activities."

MRS. FULLER, as the First Lady of the Commonwealth, is easily carrying out a very pleasant role to occupy in the social scene, a niche quite entirely her own. She gives many an occasion artistic, festive or philanthropic—with her distinguished presence. Always beautifully arrayed, is the First Lady, in just the mode to enhance her slender bright and radiant dark beauty.

OTHER SPECIAL GUESTS of official and important will be Mrs. Alonzo Cook, Mrs. Russell Russell Hart, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Mrs. Wier Dwyer, Mrs. William D. Young, Mrs. Sylvia D. Johnston, Mrs. Joseph McCord, Mrs. Thomas Logan and Mrs. A. Russell Atwater.

THE ENTIRE SCOPE of the "Activities" scheme is very wide and all embracing, with more definitely outlined the picture for the women. It has to do with the various fields in which Woman is now winning laurels, a theme widening as all agree.

MRS. FRANCIS W. PEARBODY of the White Elephant Tails and she and her co-workers carry and the elephant motif in grey and white paper headpieces of Sopping ears and waving trunks.

HER ASSISTANTS are Mrs. Marion Lawrence Higgins, supreme head of the aquatic under which which goes forward under the banners of the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Walter Pratt, Mrs. Joseph McCord, Mrs. Thomas Logan and Mrs. A. Russell Atwater.

STILL OTHERS are Mrs. Robert S. Buckley, Mrs. Arthur Rock, Mrs. True Worley White, Mrs. Henry Bell McElwain and Mrs. Arthur W. Wheeler.

SPEAKING OF tea again, the Thorne Guild and its next Sunday afternoon affair at the Boston Art Club are craving more than a trifle of interest for the Guild's fashionably artistic following.

THE BEST REVOLVING about the social productions of that ambitious and far-reaching center will be in force to give greeting to Joe Alexander, a picturesque stage personage who is coming over from New York.

SENIOR ALESSANDRO is star of the tea and is expected to be the guest of honor of the "Shade Man" to be given next Monday night Tuesday evenings at the Pine Arts Theatre. His part is "Pierre," the hero.

THREATENING BE an enthusiastic greeting for the youthful star, and a warm one as well for Katharine Tegen, who is the author of "The Shade Man," which is of Old England. By the way, Lenora Bradley is also a special guest.

MRS. ERNEST L. JOHNSON, Mrs. Edward Crosby, Mrs. Ellen Shaw and Dr. Grace E. Cross will preside at the table of the cups, and many professionals and Guild members will be on hand from four until six in the afternoon for the pleasant tea.

AND STILL further speaking of tea, yesterday's affair at Richard Pratt in Lime Street was the usual happy occasion that set following these distinguished artistic efforts may always anticipate.

MR. PLATT, who commanded a quartet of musicians, two singers and two violinists, and his company of musicians, who included Mrs. Lois Holcomb Barron and Mrs. Eva Brumbaugh, both delighted with their voices, and Mrs. Celia Foster and Miss Lora Coy were also much applauded.

FOR THE MERRY hour when tea and chat replaced the moving sounds of music, Mrs. George H. Taylor and Mr. Edmund H. Taylor, the hospitable couple, sat behind the hostesses in Mr. Platt's beautifully appointed diningroom.

THE AFTERNOON of music and tea continues through the early spring until late in April, which is, of course, a happy thought to Mr. Platt's circle of intimates who so devotedly assist Mrs. Winter's association of musical afternoons.

LYNN CITY HOME HEAD DENIES CHARGES
Herbert R. Richardson, superintendent of the Lynn City Home to day continued his categorical denial of all the charges of neglect of his duties, brought against him by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cochran, a member of the board of overseers.

At the opening session of the hearing held by the overseers, Richardson denied he fed the inmates of the home on skimmed milk, although James F. Armstrong, a former cook at the home, testified that Richardson told him to skim all the milk at least once before giving it to the inmates.

Both Richardson and his wife denied that they permitted inmates of the home to get drunk.

THE BREWSTER TO INVESTIGATE NEW BRUNSWICK PROJECT
Augusta, Me., March 19.—Governor Brewer has announced that he will thoroughly investigate the rights of the State of Maine in connection with the proposed power development of Grand Falls, N. B., by the New Brunswick Electric power commission.

Replying to a letter from Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, asking for his views of the effect of the project on the State or local private interests, Governor Brewer said:

"The execution of the proposed dam and power project would result in a boundary stream and will affect properties within the State of Maine."

TAKEN WANTED FOR COUNCIL SHOW

Girls With Ability Invited to Attend Rehearsal of "The Quaker Girl" Tonight

If one feels the least bit historical and can demonstrate the fact to any worthy degree, Temple Kooklin, Israel, Harvard street, Brookline, is the place and tonight is the time. Contenders of feminine wit and charm will be all lined up ready to make selections for the remaining parts of the Junior Council show and you may be the lucky person.

Rehearsals for this production have only been in preliminary form and the real training is about to begin.

Only a few of the principal parts have been selected. There are still a number more to be distributed. The musical comedy has an enlarged chorus of thirty-five girls and many more choruses are all needed. Tonight's rehearsal, it is believed, will see the completion of the cast.

Ralph Barlow, who directed the show last year, will again develop the raw material. Miss Leah Dancin, who is the author of "The Quaker Girl," will be given the opportunity to direct the show.

Countess numbers are anticipating the production. Miss Bremer is an accomplished pianist. Any one wishing information as to how to do some work for the Council and the production should call her at 4000.

Dr. Henry Linenthal will talk tonight at the Memorial Institute, 210 Hill avenue, Roxbury, on "The Importance of Periodical Health Examinations." Dr. Linenthal is connected with the Massachusetts General and Beth Israel hospitals. He is also attached to the Harvard Medical School.

Experts have found that people continue at their jobs despite physical inability from within. Ignorance of any internal disorders they go along, presumably in good health, but actually suffering from general impairment. Dr. Linenthal advocates the periodic examination and it is expected he will comment on the Chinese method of paying their doctors for keeping them well.

The meeting has been arranged by the health department of the city of Boston, of which Dr. Benjamin Behn is chairman.

Speaking about citizenship at the annual meeting of the Chelsea Hebrew Ladies' Charitable Society, Abraham Alpert, editor of the Jewish Daily American, said: "It is through no fault of the aliens themselves that most of them are 'not naturalized.' The 'meeting was held at the Walnut Street Synagogue with President Mrs. A. Aronson presiding."

Mr. Alpert continued, "One of the many reasons that alien do not become naturalized is that many of them have not been able to find free wives and under a steep price, married aliens with wives abroad are refused naturalization on that account. On the other hand it is practically impossible for their wives to join them as long as the husbands are unnaturalized."

The society adopted a resolution against the registration of alien. Over 1,200 members attended this meeting.

The Young People's Society of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, will have the pleasure of hearing Dr. Maurice Heller, director of the Federal Jewish Charities and co-operation for the Hebrew University in Palestine, at the organization meeting to do its utmost.

March 21 is the date of the installation of officers and it is expected that outside workers will be gotten into the building. The organization of Lynn, a W. H. A. organizer, gave the new order many helpful rules and regulations to follow in its course of activity.

Two of America's most prominent Jews, Judge Henry Goldfarb, former United States Congressman, and Charles Hartman, a member of the executive committee of the Congregation Grand Lodge, I. O. S. B., will be guests and the principal speakers at a meeting of Amos Lodge, to be held next Monday, March 23, in Beacon Hall, Coolidge Corner.

Final Friday services will be held at Temple Ohabei Shalom with Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams delivering a sermon on "Money and Power," on Friday night, March 27.

HUB ASSESSOR EVOLVES NEW TAX IDEA

Law Obliging Citizens to List Personal Belongings Sought

With Boston citizens just getting their first wind after filing their State income tax returns, and while the Legislature is debating the imposing of a flat sales tax on automobiles, in addition to the present taxes on cars, Edward T. Kelly, chairman of the Boston Board of Assessors, has come forward with a new plan for getting additional taxes from Boston citizens each year.

Kelly is urging that the Legislature pass a law which would make it compulsory for every citizen to file annually a complete list of his personal property. Then the assessors would have no difficulty in assessing the property at the rate of $24.70 per $1,000, the rate fixed by law.

VALUATION DIFFICULT.
In advocating the law, Kelly declares it is impossible for his assessors to determine how much personal property a man or woman owns at the present time. His assessors find it difficult to establish the value of a diamond engagement ring or a young lady's car on her finger. The assessors cannot determine at present whether the washing machine or the sewing machine, the value which his wife wears and all other personal property is in the house.

His law, says Mr. Kelly, would settle this difficulty, as the citizens would have to give in his annual statement the exact value of the washing machine, the sewing machine, the value which his wife wears and all other personal property in the house.

The law provides that $1,000 worth of furniture shall be exempt from taxes in each household. But jewelry, automobiles, pianos, etc., and all furniture over $1,000 would all be subject to the tax.

The city is loaning much money each year, declares Mr. Kelly, who has set about to have his plan enacted into a law that the city officers may be further swayed by the additional revenue his measure would produce.

VESSELS CRASH IN HEAVY FOG AT SEA

Tanker Limping Back to Port;
Condition of Other Is Not Known

New York, March 19.—The oil tanker Andromeda and the Norwegian freighter Thyra were in collision today in a heavy fog, 125 miles south of Andrews Light, according to a radio message received by the independent wireless telegraph station. Both vessels were damaged, but neither apparently was in danger of sinking. The Andromeda's bow was stove in.

The tanker, a 4,399-ton ship, owned by C. D. Mallory & Co., reported by radio that she was on her way back to New York Harbor unaided. The vessel was bound for Tampico.

The Thyra, 943 tons, has no radio and the extent of damage was not known.

Planks Carried 16 Miles, Town to Town, by Tornado

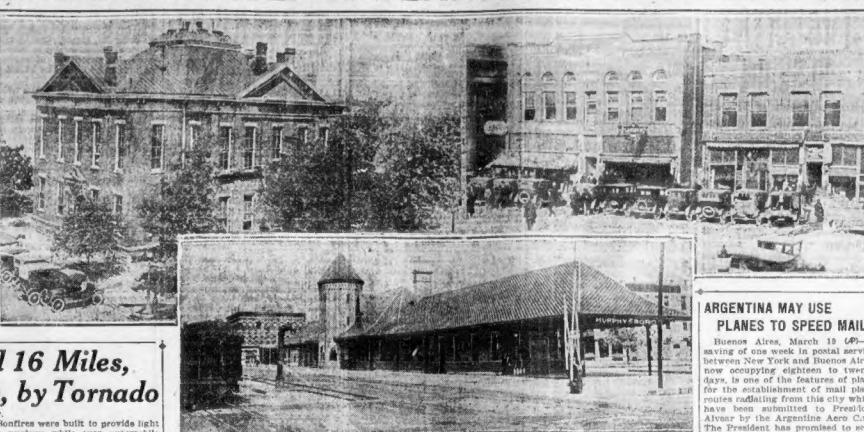

Great incidents that accompany a tornado were numerous. At DePue the hurricanes raged with such fury that planks from piles of lumber were carried to DePue, six miles away.

At De Soto, too, a grain elevator was yanked from its foundation and moved forty feet without being demolished.

A spokesman on the Illinois Central who witnessed the disaster at De Soto described it thus: "A crash of thunder, preceded by two blinding flashes of lightning, after which there was nothing left of the town. Royalties and Bloomington, two small mining towns, also were struck by the storm, and at Royalties several persons reported to have been killed and a few injured. No casualties, however, were reported from Bloomington.

Schoolhouses, churches, armories and all other available places were pressed into use as morgues and hospitals. In many instances it was necessary to move the dead and injured to nearby towns because of the lack of available places of shelter.

ARGENTINA MAY USE PLANES TO SPEED MAILS

Buenos Aires, March 19 (AP)—A saving of one week in postal service between New York and Buenos Aires, now occupying eighteen to twenty days, is one of the features of plans for the establishment of mail planes routes radiating from this city which have been submitted to President Alvear by the Argentine Aero Club. The President has promised to send a message to Congress at its forthcoming session commending an appropriation for carrying out the plans. These include mail plane service to Antofagasta, Chile; Asuncion, Paraguay; and remote points of the Argentine Republic.

LIMERICK NOT ALL UNLUCKY

"Friday the 13th" Limerick resulted in many clever "last lines" from fans, most of whom figured it would not be an unlucky day for them if they could annex first prize of $25.

It also brought many interesting letters to the desk of the Limerick editor, including one from Mrs. A. W. Russell of Johnston Park, Roxbury, who told an interesting story of her experience with the "unlucky number."

Mrs. Russell wrote: "Thirteen is my lucky number. I am one of thirteen. I have thirteen in my family and many is the time I have sat thirteen at table. And 23 is my lucky number, too. My father was twenty-three years of age when he married and twenty-three years elapsed between his first and last for the contract clause."

child. The last was the thirteenth. So I hope this day will prove lucky to me."

Bessie Rondina of River Avenue, Providence, wrote: "I sure did experience a thrill that comes once in a lifetime when I saw my name listed as a winner for a Limerick. I was just about getting discouraged but now I try each new limerick with high hopes of success. I am going to put aside the dollar and keep it so I won't spend my luck. I thank you for the opportunity of being a participant in your interesting contest."

From Joseph Kirby of Kellogg Street, Portland, came the following: "Your check received and I thank you. I am proud to say that I have been a reader of the Boston Evening American for as good many years. I know a live paper when I see one; that is the reason the Boston Evening American is the only Boston paper I ever read. I am taking great interest and will continue sending red-hot lines as I expect to hit the big prize right plump in the eye before the contract clause."

Homeless Prince Is Seeking Rich Girl as Wife

Berlin, March 18 (Wireless to Universal Service)—Wanted, a woman who desires to become a real princess. Age, fat or lean—no matter.

Chorus girls or film stars eligible. Only requirement is sufficient money to outfit a rugged prince and his men. Apply to Prince Alexander Hohenhausen, Budapest.

The prince, picked up homeless and adrift on a park bench, has asked a lawyer to find him a rich wife in haste. Unless some princess comes to his aid he will be expelled from the country.

The unwarranted and unjust reflection cast on former Attorney-General Daugherty. The conduct and attitude of some of these defendants has, through the machinations of unscrupulous political foes and personal enemies, put a stain on the character of a man who in all respects, honestly and courageously administered the office of Attorney-General.

The jury, he said, could judge of the business and falsity of the charges that the Department of Justice under the administration of President Harding and the direction of his Attorney-General deeply and indirectly convicted at or contemned a violation of the law.

He added, "These that destroy public confidence in our officials are hitting a blow at our institutions that threatens the existence of the Republic."

CONGRESS ENDS TURBULENT SESSION

One of Last Acts Is Refusing to Confirm Another Coolidge Appointment

Washington, March 18.—Memorable for its breach with the White House over the Warren nomination, the special session of the Senate which convened March 4, had passed into history today after pursuing its turbulent way to the very closing hours.

With the Senate's adjournment on its opinion with respect to the regular session on the first Monday in December, unless called in special session. Of this President Coolidge has indicated no intention.

The Senate finished off the record of its session by again standing on its opinion with respect to a presidential nomination, refusing, as in the case of Charles E. Warren, to give its approval to the reappointment of Thomas F. Woodlock of New York to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Sent up by the President after it had failed of confirmation at the last session, the nomination was referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee, which did not even meet to consider it. The President is expected by his close friends to give Mr. Woodlock a recess appointment.

With a large number of nominations, however, approved without debate on roll call in the closing hours, the Warren and Woodlock nominations and twenty postwar veterans were the only ones of all submitted by the President during the session.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped when Other Medicines Failed

Walpole, N. H. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find it has improved my health wonderfully. For months and months I was not regular and had terrible pains. They used to affect my side so I could not work. I read of others being helped by the Vegetable Compound and I thought I might help me. I am very much better now, strong enough to do my own housework, and have two dear babies to care for besides. I tried other medicines before taking the Vegetable Compound, but I was never treated for my troubles. I speak highly of the Vegetable Compound to my friends and recommend it to any woman for rundown and nervous condition." — Mrs. F. H. FULLER, Walpole, New Hampshire.

Over 200,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 out of every 100 of the replies say "Yes," and because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women it should help you.

A recent census reports 96 out of every 100 women are benefited by LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

OFFICER SAVES PICKPOCKET FROM MOB

Inspector Rollins Fights Off Crowd Who Try to Beat Up Prisoner

Louis Barnett, who has a lengthy record as a pickpocket and vagrant, is fortunate he is able to appear in Municipal Court today as the charge is vagrancy.

But for the plucky way of Police Inspector Joseph M. Rollins, the prisoner would now be in a hospital or a morgue.

The inspector protected Barnett from a crowd of infuriated men and boys at Northampton and Tremont streets, who sought to visit immediate and violent punishment on the man for his alleged address as a pickpocket.

Witnesses in the Northampton street section have had their pockets picked with regularity, while waiting for street cars, during the past several weeks. Many lost their pay envelopes and falling far short.

Inspector Rollins, assigned to the case, saw Barnett being mobbed by the crowd. The man ran when the inspector approached and was captured after a chase. A mob immediately started the policeman and his prisoner and Rollins finally was forced to storm Barnett into a doorway and stand off the angry crowd with his bare feet until the police patrol arrived.

BROKEN WRIST FEELS TO BEAT PUZZLE FAN

Maine Woman, Confined to Bed Sends in Prize-Winning Solution

"Can you imagine a woman who broken wrist in spilling sitting up to beat crossword puzzles in the Boston Evening American prize tournament?"

Well, that's how enthusiastic in Maine she is, according to a letter that reached the Crossword puzzle editor from the woman's daughter. And it happened on Friday, the twentieth, at that.

The enthusiastic in question is Mrs. Lorenson Harston of Mechanic Falls, Me., whose thirteen-year-old daughter, Thelma, is wearing a "crossword puzzle dress" made from cloth by winning a prize in the American's contest.

In writing the crossword puzzle fan Thelma says:

"Mother had a fatal spell yesterday and fell and broke her wrist, so after having it put in splints it worked your puzzle just the same. As a matter of fact, I am sending just the same. She did her best, as far as she had to, to make prize money for brother and her own little chance to beat her."

The solution in question was made out, considering the disability of which the child wrote, and has been awarded one of the prizes.

For sending in neatly arranged correct solutions to No. 22, the word puzzle several readers were named as winners of the Boston Evening American, one of the finest daily papers in the country.

These prizes were given through the courtesy of Walter Hall, manager of the Boston Evening American, and the Boston Evening American, one of the finest daily papers in the country.

'OTHER WOMAN' SOUGHT IN LONG SUIT

Divorce Trial Halts Until Grace Collins of Boston Is Found

Miss Grace Collins, whose name has figured prominently in the divorce suit of Mrs. Grace B. Long against Richard H. Long, son of a one-time candidate for governor of Massachusetts, will be the star witness when the suit is resumed in Boston.

The case has been temporarily postponed by Judge Dolan to permit court officers time to locate Miss Collins, who is named by Mrs. Long as the woman to whom Long sold much attention and gave various sums of money.

The question of adultery entered the case upon the questioning of witnesses concerning a visit of the police of the Brighton district to the Resolute street suite, which the plaintiff said he rented to Mr. Long and whom he knew, with the young woman there, as Mr. and Mrs. Long.

It appeared that Long is under a complaint in the Brighton district court on a statutory offense.

Mrs. Catherine Mollen of Springfield, who said her husband is the district manager of the R. H. Long Motor Company in Springfield, told of visiting Miss Collins on Commonwealth avenue and of having seen Long pass money to Miss Collins.

In Springfield, she said, when Miss Collins and Long were at her home over night, she heard Miss Collins tell of having been a former employee in a Boston store.

Long for money as he was dining away on a trip. She said that Mrs. Collins had a three-story dining room and a fur coat given her by Long, but his testimony was stricken out when it appeared that Long was not present when Miss Collins told of the gift. Mrs. Mollen said she was not now living with her husband.

SENATE ORDERS ALLEGED TRUST SCHEME PROBED

Reported Attempts of Interests to Kill Co-operative Marketing to Be Investigated

By JOHN T. LANIERT.
Washington, March 19.—(Universal)—An investigation of alleged attempts to prevent business interests to co-operative marketing associations, which are growing by leaps and bounds in this country, has been ordered by the Senate on motion of Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota.

The investigation will be one of the most important to be made this year by the Federal Trade Commission. It will affect 16,525 co-operative associations, with 2,566,640 members, who last year marketed more than $2,500,000,000 of their own products.

Shipstead said "there is a threat in this country a concerted scheme to destroy the co-operative. A boy out against them has been declared by powerful, private business interests. From Chicago to the Pacific coast, private business interests are organizing 'co-operative' associations, which they say, are designed to help the 'co-operative' co-operatives, but which are really working their way into the farmers' pockets with the ultimate purpose of destroying them from the inside. The same interests are at work in New York, Boston and other large cities of the East where the farmers are slowly but surely being organized to sell their products to the consumer."

President Coolidge is known to believe that assistance of the co-operatives is the most helpful attitude the government could take for relief of farmers' distress. The development and encouragement of co-operative marketing is recommended by his special Agricultural Commission.

Miss Sheehan pleaded guilty to a statutory charge and received a three-month sentence to the county farm.

NURSE CHARGES WATERHOUSE UNDER SPELL

Strangely Affected by Presence of the Woman Accused of Extortion

London, March 18.—(Universal Cable).—Evidence of ten years of friendship between Lady Waterhouse and Frank Waterhouse, which witnesses for his widow declare, in effect, that the infatuated Waterhouse, then a bachelor, his whole fortune of nearly $100,000, was given by former servant of the Waterhouse household.

Antoniushan tales of the strange influence that Lady Wilson-Barker had over Waterhouse were related by John Macdonald, male sure, who said that on occasions when Waterhouse, a partial invalid at that time, would learn that Lady Wilson-Barker was about to visit him, he would sit up in bed and the perspiration would run off his face.

The widow of Waterhouse is suing Lady Wilson-Barker, her husband, Captain Sir David Wilson-Barker, and R. P. Sheehan, to compel them to make restitution of the sums alleged to have been wheedled out of Waterhouse.

Richard Rowton, member of the firm of Wilkinson and Bone, solicitors who probated the will of Waterhouse's mother, testified that Frank at the time of his mother's death had an average income of $10,000 for life free of tax with securities and cash amounting to $250,000. In 1918 the income had fallen to $1,500 and in 1921 all his private income was gone.

ACTRESS PLAYS ON AS FATHER LIES DEAD

Beatrice Sheehan of Salem "Carries On" for Sake of Other Players

Salem, March 18.—Few of the hundreds of patrons who have been entertained at the Empire Theatre this week by the Salem stock company knew that a grim tragedy was being enacted on the stage before them, entirely apart from the piece presented by the players.

A prominent member of the stock company is Miss Beatrice Sheehan, the only Salem girl in the production.

Throughout the week, Miss Sheehan has smilingly appeared in her part at every presentation of the show, to all outward appearances a carefree, happy young girl, but in reality broken-hearted daughter, who with difficulty repressed her tears of grief.

Miss Sheehan's father, Dr. William T. Sheehan, lay dead in the Sheehan home, a few blocks from the theatre, while his daughter "carried on."

Today Dr. Sheehan was buried, Tuesday, as yesterday and the day before, Miss Sheehan appeared in her role in the stock company production.

When Dr. Sheehan, a leading member of the medical profession in Essex County, died on Monday, the manager of the stock company offered to close down the show until after the funeral.

"I'll carry on. It's not fair to the others," was the only word from Miss Sheehan.

As soon as her part in the show was over, the sorrow-stricken daughter would hurry to her fathered home where she would weep and in the theatre, would give audience to her wrought emotions.

Head Hunting Now Business Venture

New York, March 18.—C. Lester Little, who has just returned after spending a year among the head-hunting Indians of the upper Amazon country in Ecuador, said that hunting and preserving heads which was formerly a sacred rite, had become a commercial enterprise because of the demands of tourists for the "souvenirs."

Mr. Little said that originally head hunting was done in obedience to the tribal law of an eye for an eye. Today it has become purely commercial and the Indians will indiscriminately supply the demands of the tourists for the shrunken heads, which bring as high as $200 or $400 in South American ports, he added.

from the floors and walls of the burning buildings. Soldiers patrolled the bridge between Palm Beach and West Palm Beach.

Twenty-three persons, most of them negroes, were arrested on charges of looting after the fire. The estimated damage to the Breakers, building alone, was $1,600,000 and the Palm Beach Hotel one-fourth of that amount.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Guests today eagerly awaited opening of the safes in the ruined hotel-sites containing millions in cash and jewelry.

In the red-hot safe of the Breakers, which was located in the ruins, it was estimated that at least $6,000,000 in jewelry had been placed for safekeeping.

On this vast amount, Mrs. Jesse L. Livermore, wife of the financier, is said to own at least $1,000,000.

Scores of fashionable folk from Boston, Newport, New York and other parts of the country stormed the telephone office with messages to their bankers and relatives asking for funds.

While the fire was raging, excited men and women threw jewelry,

Bay State People Have Thrilling Escapes at Fire

Telegrams containing reassuring messages of safety came pouring into Boston and New England today to relatives of local residents who were guests of the two burned Palm Beach hotels.

One of the earliest messages was received at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Best, No. 11 Gloucester street, Back Bay. The telegram stated that the couple had had a thrilling experience, but had come through safely.

Mrs. Harry L. Spencer, whose husband has an office at No. 11 Kingsway street, telegraphed that she had been rescued from the Breakers only a few minutes before the fire was discovered.

From Mr. and Mrs. George Wendell Phillips of Brookline came also an assurance of their safety. Frank L. Dunne, head of P. L. Dunn & Co., clothing and tailors of Washington street, reported to his office at an early hour that he had escaped from the burning Breakers unscathed and was due to check out next Sunday night.

'IDEAS' A NEW MENTAL ILL, DOCTOR SAYS

French Maid Suing for $6000 Described as Sufferer From Such

"Ideas" is the newest form of mental disturbance to make its appearance in the courts of Boston.

Helen Leger, middle-aged French maid, who is suing her former employer, Mrs. Kate H. Dunn, for $6,000 damages, alleging that she was deprived of her freedom, suffered from "ideas," according to Dr. William H. Prescott, neurologist, who appeared on the stand in Suffolk Superior Court.

It was Dr. Prescott who was called into the Dunn home by Mrs. Dunn to examine the maid, and who later was instrumental in having her held at the Boston State Hospital for a time for observation.

On the stand in her own behalf, Miss Leger testified that she once was the guest of Queen Victoria of England and that she worked for many families of European nobility. The doctor described the maid as being a sufferer from "ideas."

Dr. Charles O. Dewey testified that he found Helen to have been sane, to have talked to herself, and to have made loud noises in her room, and was fearful.

Asked if these were signs of insanity he confessed they were not. He said his conversation with Helen was entirely in English, as he could speak no French. He said he had no difficulty in understanding her.

Dr. Frank A. member of the staff of the Boston State Hospital, said Helen had told him at the hospital that Mrs. Dunn refused to give her a vacation or to allow her to have "time off." He also told of a conversation with the French maid in which he said she told him Mrs. Dunn had ordered a pet dog killed which she (Helen) had been tenderly nursing.

teeth black, which also means "Keep away, I belong to somebody."

THE PATIENCE that women have shown is really amazing. But things are better, the highly developed white man puts a pearl or diamond collar around his wife's neck. That also means "She is mine," but sometimes the pearl collar is mistaken.

AS YOU READ of Chicago's dreadful murder, you know something of a trying moment of emotion. A Dr. Palmer, indicted with Shephard, who is accused as chief criminal, testifies that he had killed a million dollars' worth of property, and that he had killed a million dollars' worth of property, and that he had killed a million dollars' worth of property.

MURDER IS MURDER, but there are degrees of horror. The doctor confessing complicity in the McClintock murder, confesses that he taught Shephard how to administer typhoid germ to the unfortunate boy, who had killed a million dollars' worth of property, and that he had killed a million dollars' worth of property.

IF YOUR FRIEND has a bad cold, be polite, smile, bow, say, "I never saw you looking better," but don't shake hands. That is the advice of Dr. Band-ward of Michigan University. Influenza is spread by handshaking. You get the germ from your friend's hand, transfer them to your hands, and then to your nose.

HANDSHAKING IS FOOLISH and archaic, anyhow; as "time off." He also told of a conversation with the French maid in which he said she told him Mrs. Dunn had ordered a pet dog killed which she (Helen) had been tenderly nursing.

THE LEARNED Henry G. Lawrence, professor of history, drops this bombshell into a ladies' club: "The first bootleggers were the good Puritans, and some of the Puritan girls and women were frivolous and fast personalities."

There was quite a demand for smart letters, it appears.

DESTRUCTIVE GALE SWEEPS NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, N. Y., March 18.—A high wind of almost gale force proportions struck Niagara Falls today. The roof was blown from St. Stanislaw Church and crashed on to the floor of the convent of the Sisters. No one was injured. Worshippers had left the church only a few minutes before the roof was blown off. Many signs were blown down about the city and scores of windows smashed.

verve, but Colonel Denington while admitting he had received sums of money from her, declared she sent them "out of generosity on her part" and not as loans.

When Sir Ellis asked if the Countess of Carmarvon had given Colonel Denington $100,000 upon their marriage to "preserve your dignity," the witness replied, "Yes, sir."

Sir Ellis flashed back, "Do you think that after you had accepted $100,000 and a flat from another man's wife you had much dignity to preserve?"

Colonel Denington, who previously testified that Countess Carmarvon gave him this amount in 1912, which was before the Earl of Carmarvon died, turned to the court protesting, "My lord, this is blackmail!" The court, however, ruled that the question was permissible.

Denington asserted that the introduction of money matters into the case was "pure invention on the part of his former wife, not only to show up her, but to show up my wife, the Dowager Countess Carmarvon."

The International Southern middleweight who always gives action in the ring has been installed a 10 to 8 favorite for his ten-round bout with Leo Bogach of Bridgeport, which will be staged by the Commercial A. The speculative element is of the opinion that Flowers can defeat any middleweight in the world with the exception of Delaney. He shows enough combative ability in his Boston starts against Billy Britton, Tommy Robeson and Lou Bogaas to convince ring followers he is a winner.

The last meeting between Tiger and Bogash was one of the most spectacular fights ever staged in this city. Bogash carried the battle to the Georgian from the bell in the first round. He shook up Florentine with heavy blows to the head.

men's boats and the freighted sloops. They heard the multitudinous muffled splashing, which told them the progress of the Harwood's anchoring and the debarking of passengers and cargo.

From that general sound finally issued the hearing, definite but of a strange tone. One came from the group of women. She stood like a statue until the ship's bow bearing Brown and Adams bumped the wood of the wharf; then she fled.

Her bare feet pattered the length of the wharf. They stirred the petals of the ribbon of skirt and struck the clew of a path leading upward into the woods. Here they stopped. The woman coughed and waited. Presently she heard voices. The first one made her catch her breath.

"Follow me, Adams."

"On your heels!" It was a stranger's tone. "Keep right on going, old man."

She ran the length of the path to where a bridge led to a low mass of wood and latched grass on the slope of a ravine. From within this structure shone a faint light.

It fell on a shaded keystone lamp in Brown's sitting room and poked out a limited circle of light on the wall and a low table. On this were arranged a tray with bottle and spoon and two small plates, and a half-dozen of the long packets containing printed matter and short news containing correspondence.

Presently it shone on an arm and leg of a brown girl who came and glimmered after her. She moved into the gloom and found matches and a lamp. The lighting came out of candles on its ledge brought a masterpiece into the picture. At the other end of the room were more candles. She lit them. They added to the room's detail and round table heaped with books.

And they revealed Tala. Tala, decked in her garb of cloth of gold against the home-coming of her mother. The cloth draped and grinning face on her breast in a fold which followed her undulating waist and fell against the hollow backs of her padded knees.

Like Madmen
She returned to the lamp and considered her preparations. Then she disappeared. The men entered. Brown peered at Adams through narrowed lids. The eyes of the guest roved the room curiously, and he noted the movement of the grass curtain as it "doomed" through which Tala had fled.

"Where are the open arms?" he leaped.

Brown silently motioned to the "chair better," he said.

He noted the single glass and raised his hands to clap. Tala told into the room with a second glass in her hand.

"You are," said Brown.

Tala's burning eyes averted him. Brown threw himself into the chair and stretched out his legs. He paid the native girl kneeling and banded herself at the fastenings of his pajamas. He stroked her hair and winked over her black head at Adams.

"Will you find this at the end of $1000 mail?"

Adams smiled. "There was, indeed, something to be said for the philosophy of this." Adams wondered what he would find at the end of his home-ward journey. His lips lightened.

"I expect," he admitted, "that I'll find trouble." He glanced at Tala. She was as beautiful as a young tiger cat. "If only you could keep this paradise for me!"

"I can," Brown said up and took the mass of accumulated mail in his hands. "I'll show you how I do it. I'll send the bulker packet of printed matter to Tala."

Adams was startled at the expression of venomous hate which shone from her eyes as she looked at the bundle.

"This mail," explained Brown, "is the one I left behind me. That's the only mail I don't want. It's a bunch of letters from a girl named Tala. She's suspicious of me."

Adams nodded to her.

Mail from Home
The brown girl came to the fireplace, took a candle in her hand and touched its flame to the paper. She tossed the bundle then into the flames over burnt amber by the flame. Brown drew eagerly with the second bundle. The letter went into the flame one by one.

From the corner of an envelope he read, ally.

"Office of the Corner, Chicago, Illinois." He looked up. "New here," the corner must concern me. But it doesn't." She stared at him with suppressed anger. "Death, Tala, is not our enemy."

She laughed joyously as she tossed the contents into the flame. She returned and moved her hand, which she continued to look over, which she turned something ghastly about the base with which she burned them as he handed them over to her, one by one. He held a square

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D. Former President of the American Medical Association.

I AM greatly indebted to a correspondent for the following communication:

"What can be done for weak heart muscle in a person over thirty, after the apparent cause has been removed several months ago? I have sometimes failed to cure such infection through long standing. The patient of a few weeks ago, what are the safe grounds?"

"You have often written a warning. I have only to look to the fact that this case was discovered, but I have not seen an article about what to do after the damage is done. It goes to show that in an attempt to keep a variety of subjects to the front, I may sometimes fail to carry out my intention."

The patient of a few weeks ago, what are the safe grounds? In the teeth or tonsils, or intestines, as always followed by recovery from heart conditions, when such conditions are caused by the infection, and are not yet organic. Conditions that are caused by something definite, as in these cases and that disappear when the causes are removed, are said to be symptomatic.

Young Stacey when he has made a mess of things.
"Even with no sense of humor you might at least have been able to watch your step, if it weren't for the eternal distraction of sex. This distraction has always existed; but men, who once left women when they went to work, now meet them there, as well as elsewhere, a fraction that never before was taken, so accessible or so elusive."
"Working fewer hours and used to work with a theory of apprenticeship, entirely superficial now, religion, young men are just to new phases of the old, mentioning the sex in the progress of retirement, without mentioning the sex in the whole procedure of retirement, though that could plain more than all other elements put together."
"We're ready to be afraid of being unfair to sex. That will always minimize whether we want it or not. But we could show a little more sense in taking account of it. The individual man needs to take account of it as heaviest overhead. Yet having done that, to put the thing aside, you're still without considering the sex in the sex chart."
We honestly thought that sex in 1923, A. D. was something different than sex in 1913, B. C. But as we read about Miss Perrine, we see thousands of other Miss Perrines on the street, gradually it dawns on us.
"Think it over again. Sex is the idea and we'll never get away from it. But how about a little more originality in the way we do our thing? We'll never get away from it. Copyright, 1923, Elsie Robinson."

MEDBURY SAYS

By John P. Medbury
LONDON society women have done away with cumbersome clothes. They are now wearing evening gowns which don't take up any more room than a wart on a giant.
THESE dresses are so small that they make a pocket handkerchief look like a blanket.
THE modiste shops which sell them use postage stamps for wrapping paper.
BUT this doesn't help the husbands any. The less a woman wears the bigger it takes her to get dressed.
SHE can rush to an appointment "As is" and still be two hours late.
HER excuse is that she has more to take off than she has to put on.
SOME of the prominent society women change their costumes three or four times at one ball. The husband usually carries a couple of extra gowns in his cigarette case.
THESE dresses are made of such flimsy material that an Eskimo dress could wear forty-seven of them and still freeze to death.
SHE'd have to sew hot water bags on them instead of beads.

WHAT'S IN THE BOY'S MIND

By Win. A. McKeever
Lecturer and Writer on the Training and Education of Children
WHILE he was asleep the mother of a twelve-year-old examined his pockets and found the following:
A small compass for drawing at school; a crumpled up, peevish drawing of a boat; a handkerchief that long ago needed laundering; a knife that had done service as a saw; a rubber band snapped and a sprig of eucalyptus carefully wrapped in tough paper.
What can you read to the character of the boy from these pocket possessions? Some read the hand, some the feet, some the bumps on the skull. Who can read the pocket contents of a twelve-year-old?
The crumpled drawing of a boat indicates something that has been done from the point of personal interest and a private which engrosses quiet, constructive thinking.
The soiled handkerchief is typical of the twelve-year-old's interest in his personal matters. No healthy boy of the sort ever takes to a handkerchief or cares to use one. He carries one only to please mother or sister.
The crumpled drawing of a boat is a real member of the gang to which he belongs, the group which just now has more to do with his education than either parents or teacher. He is far more conscious of its presence than he is of the dainty in mother's eye on him.
The little knife shows the boy to be a real member of the gang to which he belongs, the group which just now has more to do with his education than either parents or teacher. He is far more conscious of its presence than he is of the dainty in mother's eye on him.
The soiled handkerchief is typical of the twelve-year-old's interest in his personal matters. No healthy boy of the sort ever takes to a handkerchief or cares to use one. He carries one only to please mother or sister.

BEDTIME STORY

WHAT A LITTLE QUEEN EATS.
By Foxy Grandpa.
"FOXY GRANDPA," and Bobby "as we stood by the bedside, "Take you notice that all of these ones are not alike?"
"I have, indeed," I answered.
"There are three kinds of bees in every hive," Bobby exclaimed.
"Yes, Bobby," I answered. Do you see those fat bees, whose bodies are grayer than the others and rounded instead of pointed? And do you see that their eyes are almost as large as the rest of their bodies?"
"Like that one there?" asked Bobby, pointing to one which I had described.
"Yes," I replied. "Those bees are the gentlest, best of the bees. They are very peculiar. They have no legs and spend their lives living in honey, although they don't bring their honey themselves."
"Pretty neat," murmured Bobby, who was with us of course.
"While I last," I chuckled. "It is all right. But after the time for evening, those same gentle bees, who are called drones, are put to death."
"I'm," grunted Bobby, "Bobby and a snort."
"And those slender bodied bees, Foxy Grandpa," asked Bobby, pointing to some bees which were very busy indeed, just as you would expect a bee to be.
"They are the workers, Bobby," I answered. "They are sometimes called 'nurses' but the name 'worker' suits them better. For I will tell you what those little bees do. They make wax, build cells, take care of the eggs and nurse and feed the grubs, and since there are from ten to twenty thousand bees in a hive they imagine they are kept very busy."
"I should say so," said Bobby, shaking his head and snort taking his cue off the hive.
"Who says that?" asked Bobby. "Now you're talking," I declared. "Now we come to the busiest bee in the whole little hive—the queen bee."

When You Feel Stale from Head to Feet as Result of Torpid Liver That's Nothing Equal to Stuart's Cathartic Tablets
Most people just hate to take laxative and usually wait until they feel so bad that only a violent purgative will relieve. Such people would appreciate the action of Stuart's Cathartic Tablets. They have no drastic effect, in fact they don't use the most laudable. Their main purpose is to stimulate the secretions of the bowels, thus making the bowels move. They are very gentle and act without any of the usual doses of laxative pills. But the action is remarkably thorough. And that is of more importance, due to the fact that many people are so used to a laxative that they are not so much as it is in a few days you have your bowels moving and you feel better. They have eliminated its effects.

ARMLESS MEN FIRM'S BEST PENMAN

Syracuse Billing Clerk Supports Bill and Mother by Writing With Teeth

Syracuse, N. Y., March 18.—Armless though he is, Frank Vail, is acknowledged the best penman in the employ of C. C. Duff & Son Company, wholesale butler and egg dealers at No. 1118 East Fayette street, where his ability to write with a pencil held between his teeth enabled him to hold the position of billing clerk.

Most of the story of a man who refused to be downed by adversity, to whom the tremendous odds of amputation of both arms and the shoulders were not too great to be conquered, and although crippled by an accident that would have made most men absolute dependents for life, he has made his own living, but cares for his aged mother as well.

Most of the office work of the firm that employs him falls upon the shoulders of Vail. He is not a jester of holding down a disabled man's job. With only the aid of one or two special appliances, he writes through his ability gained from sheer pluck and an indomitable spirit, he makes out bills, takes orders, directs salesmen, answers the telephone and takes care of most of the office routine.

There isn't a more valuable man in the place nor one who does more work," declared C. C. Duff, head of the firm today. "He is the business man of A. Z. He doesn't expect nor permit anyone to help him in his work either."

CRIME HIGH SCHOOLS.

The technique of crime, the science of the criminal, the philosophy of taking a chance.

The gangster is a sort of naive fatalism. As the boy grows older the more he is attracted to these things. It may become definitely criminal, or it may take the form of a sort of club.

The gang is not inherently bad. It is merely a symptom of the social disorganization. It is a manifestation of active, red-blooded youth and development, untrained after a pattern set for it in a vicious social environment.

Most gang boys are intelligent, likable and energetic. They are plucky and will develop in any direction in which they happen to be stimulated. They are NOT for the most part, but for the scientific study of the entire crime situation.

ENGLAND SEEKS IMPROVED METHODS TO SHIP FUEL.

Many other problems of transport were investigated and the results embodied in reports, will be published later.

Washington, March 18.—A decline in the use of gas oil, compared with the use of coal in the United States, was pointed out by the Department of Agriculture in making public figures showing that the average for the year was 2.55 gallons to the barrel as compared with 3.8 in the preceding year.

The consumption last year totaled 155,000,000 gallons, which was 8,000,000 less than the 1923 figure. The decline was attributed to the cold weather last summer.
